STREET WALKER IS IN THE POLICE COURT

Deplorable Condition in Business District Is Brought Out at Trial of a Negress—Stranger Invited to a Room, and on Refusing to Go, Is Attacked and Robbed.

Maggie Jones, a negress, charged with grand larceny, received a preliminary hearing before Judge W. H. Reeder this morning and was bound over to the district court with a bond fixed at $700.

Joseph Chee, attorney for the defendant, objected to the amount of the bond, stating that he believed $500, the customary bond in felony cases of this sort, was ample. Judge Reeder explained that this case consisted of alleged larceny from the person and decided to let the bond remain at $700.

Joe Baston, the Austrian who alleged that Maggie Jones had taken his purse, containing $145, was the first witness. He speaks broken English and much time was spent in securing his testimony.

He said that he had arrived from Butte on the night of November 24 and had walked along Wall avenue to look for a room that was near the depot, because he intended to leave early the next morning. Near the middle of the block, he said, a colored woman asked him what he was looking for and he answered that he wanted a room. The witness said that the defendant asked him to come to her room, but he declined the invitation and at that point she threw her arms about him and extracted his wallet from his left back pocket and ran.

"Did she run fast?" asked the attorney for the defendant.

"My, gosh! She run faster than any woman I ever see," answered Baston.

According to the witness, however, he caught her and she began to jab him in the face and neck with a hat pin.

From later testimony it developed that the chase had led them to the house of Mark Reid, 225 Twenty-sixth street, and the fight continued in the back yard of the place until the arrival of the police.

According to the Austrian's testimony, he was dragged by the woman to the place where the arrest was made.

Miss Lenora Owen of 225 Twenty-sixth street was the next witness. She testified that when she came home from a picture show on the night in question she heard a woman's screams in the back yard and upon opening the door saw Baston and the negress struggling near the door. The woman, she said, was jabbing the man with a hat pin. The man was asking for the police so she went to the telephone to call the station and while she was talking the struggling couple came into the kitchen.

Mrs. Mary Reid, who came from the show at the same time, saw the couple in the kitchen and heard the woman say that she had no purse and asked the Austrian to let her go. Baston at this time was crying out that the negress had his pocketbook.

Mark Reid said that he was in bed when he heard the noise of the scuffle, but came to the door of the kitchen at the time his wife was trying to put them out. When he dressed, the two were in the yard and he saw the colored woman grab a can of lye that was on the window sill and threaten to blind the Austrian. The witness, however, grabbed the can away from her, and in a few moments the patrol wagon came.

He saw the woman stab Baston with the hat pin.

When questioned by County Attorney Jensen, Mr. Reid said that he had been the defendant on numerous occasions and that twice she had invited him to her room. He also said that she had approached others upon the street near his home.

Both the arresting policemen, C. C. Layne and C. E. Peterson, testified that when the woman was put in the patrol wagon she wanted to know the number of the house where the fight occurred.

At the station the purse was not found on the woman, and upon the request of Baston a search was made that night in the back yard of the

Reid residence, and the wallet with contents intact was found under a lilac bush.

The wallet was introduced as testimony and was identified by Baston, who alleged that it was the purse taken from him by Maggie Jones and later thrown away by her.

FOUR MEN ARE SENTENCED TO 90 DAYS

After pleading guilty to petit larceny, Jack Raymond, James Clifton, David Morgan and Ed. Thomas told Judge Reeder that they knew of no thefts in which they were implicated, but had pleaded guilty because to them that seemed the easiest way out of their troubles.

The four men are alleged to be shoplifters. Two bolts of silk, a suit of clothes, a pair of shoes and an overcoat, all of which were stolen from merchants of the city, were found in their possession. In the complaint to which they pleaded guilty, they were charged with stealing the overcoat and suits.

When asked if they had anything to say, all told the same story, alleging that they were drunk and did not know what they were doing, if they took any articles. One of them said that the suit of clothes was left in the room by a friend who lived out of town.

Detective Burke stated that attempts had been made to sell the shoes and that the men were not drunk when arrested.

Patrolman Kelliher stated that all four had been identified by clerks from Wright's store as parties that had asked to look at furs and various other articles. The two bolts of silk were missed after the four had left the store.

Judge Reeder recorded a sentence of ninety days in each case.

UP TO HIM TO DO SOMETHING

Deacon Woods Willing to Get Busy Immediately in the Hope of Disarming Fate.

"I notice Mrs. Simmons is having a new porch put onto her house," said Deacon Wood, polishing his glasses.

"Yes," said his wife, "she always wanted one clear across the front of the house, but Silas never would build one, so the first thing she did with some of the insurance money was to have one."

The deacon looked at his paper thoughtfully for a moment, then remarked:

"The Widder Davis is setting out a good many flowers, isn't she? She keeps getting seed catalogues at the postoffice."

"Yes," replied his wife, "her heart's been set on a posy-garden a good many years, but I should almost think 'twould make Jed Davis turn over in his grave. He always thought flowers was such a foolish waste of time and money."

For a time the deacon was silent; then he said, "Wasn't that a new rubber-tired buggy I saw Prunella White in yesterday?"

"Yes," said his wife, with animation, "and I'm glad she's got it at last. She rode round for years in an old farm wagon, though Leander could well afford a decent buggy for her and the girls, but if he'd a' lived they'd never have had one."

For a time the deacon remained sunk in thought; then he asked:

"If you had a considerable sum of money to do just what you wanted with, Mandy, what would you get?"

"I'd have me a hardwood floor in that kitchen," his wife said, firmly. "I never scrub that old floor but what I run my fingers full of silvers."

"Mandy," said her husband, with fervor, "you'll see the carpenters at work on that new floor tomorrow mornin'!" And the deacon resumed his paper with a sigh of relief—Youth's Companion.

Cornellie Not in Want.

It has long been a literary tradition that Cornellie, the great French poet, died in want. But it seems clearly established that this is a mistake, dating from an apocryphal and ill interpreted letter, since a recent study of various old documents at Rouen shows that he was possessed of property in lands and houses which would have made many a latter day poet happy. In addition he had his pension from the king, although it apparently wasn't very regularly paid. And following the fashion of those days he was recompensed for his dedications to noble persons.

As for the sale of "Polyeucte," "Horace," "Le Cid" and the other dramas over which so many youngsters have groaned, through the mistaken policy of forcing students with scarcely a smattering of French grammar to wade through the classics, they doubtless had small sales, as sales are reckoned now, but we are assured that sell they did, and they may even have been the best sellers of their day.

GEORGE TOONE CALLED BY DEATH

George Toone, the 21-year-old son of A. L. Toone of North Ogden, died at Green River, Wyo., yesterday of pneumonia. The father was with the boy at the time of his death and accompanied the remains to Ogden. The body arrived at 2 o'clock and was taken to the Larkin undertaking parlors to be prepared for burial.

George Toone was born in Weber county and had lived here all his life until he went to Green River a short time ago. He had been working for the railroad here and continued that work in Wyoming.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been made but will be announced later.

Boy Owes Life to Dog.

A number of young boys were playing on the banks of the Bolton and Bury canal at Pendleton, near Manchester, England, the other afternoon when one of them slipped into the canal, which is nine or ten feet deep. A retriever dog playing near by at once jumped into the water and brought the boy to a place of safety.

Costly Camel's Hair.

The most costly of all the white animal hairs imported is that of the camel. The camel is commonly of a dirty brown color, but parts of its body may be white, as may be streaks in its mane, called veils. The camel's hair is of superior strength, and its fine white hair of sufficient length is used as a substitute for natural white human hair. White hair of the camel is worth $25 an ounce.

Why Rheumatism, Sciatica or Neuritis Drives People to the Limit of Endurance

There is the present pain, like colic or cramps twisting in your flesh—bad enough, it is true—but the horrible certainty of the next paroxysm of pain is what drives you beside yourself.

You may have been told that doctors do not understand rheumatism—that nothing will cure you.

We want to announce to the people of this city that Nurito, a new and most successful remedy for rheumatism, sciatica, and neuritis, marks a revolution in the treatment of the disease.

It is an ethically prepared powder, already firmly established as an antidote for uric acid and is entirely free from narcotics and opiates. It positively stops rheumatic pains and permanently relieves ninety-nine cases in a hundred.

Call at your druggist—discuss the matter with him and he will show you bona fide testimonials from people who suffered for years. We know we can help you with the first $1 or $2 box. ## RAILROADS AND CLIMATE IN PERU

Salt Lake, Dec. 2.—Back from the land of sudden thunder storms which threaten all life on the pampas, where medievalism is mingled with modernity, Mrs. John Connors and daughter Cora breathed long sighs of contentment when their train stopped in Salt Lake yesterday.

"It's great to be in Uncle Sam's land again," smiled Mrs. Connors.

"Salt Lake certainly looks good," chimed in Miss Cora.

Mrs. and Miss Connors, who claim residence in this city, have been passing the last 14 months or thereabouts with their husband and father, who is manager of the Cerro de Pasco mine. To visit this bit of American progress in the rock-ribbed Andes one must take the Peruvian Central at Lima and swing up into the hills to Oroya, where the real climb begins. Fifty-nine tunnels in less than 200 miles, innumerable switchbacks, are all in a climb which brings the panting "ferro-carri" over 17,500 feet above the sea. Then a short plunge down the side of the range puts the traveler at the mine, 14,000 feet above sea level.

"Quite a little bit of civilization, too," said Mrs. Connors. "They have a club where the functions are as elaborate and as much in accord with the standards of fashion as in Salt Lake. But it is a peculiar country."

When it rains the lightning is such as you can never see elsewhere. It is not safe to be upon the pampas under that bombardment.

"Peru needs American capital. It is funny, but there is a prejudice against us down there. Why, even on the American cable boat the crew is all English. Lima is a pretty town, with a fine street railway system, as good as ours, while its sanitary conditions are best left undescribed. They have a newspaper, the West Coast Leader, which we exiles read eagerly, and also a magazine, the Inca Chronicle, edited by A. Swanson. This is sold on the ships and all along the coast. Modern and present are strangely contrasted down there."

Mrs. Connors reports that work is progressing on the railroad which A. W. McCune of Salt Lake is promoting. The road will go from Goyllarisquisga, the terminal of the Cerro de Pasco, to the Amazon, and the companies operating in that section of the Andes can then secure transportation comparatively cheap for their produce, taking the water route for the last portion of the journey.
